"His height and weight were the first attributes to be noticed by NFL International.

"In coordination with the National Student Organization of American Football (ONEFA) in Mexico, they decided Gutiérrez should stay on and be invited to participate in the League's International Players Program," NFL Mexico said in a statement.

Gutiérrez is 2.08 meters tall and weighs 155 kilograms. He'll be reporting in the next few days to the Bay area team.

The offensive lineman joins Isaac Alarcón, another Monterrey Rams player who was chosen by the Dallas Cowboys last year and remained on the reserve team.

What's more, he signed a reserve contract in January, allowing him to compete to be part of the team next season.

Alfredo Gutiérrez: The Ram

During his time with the Monterrey Rams, Gutiérrez distinguished himself with his size and strength, his number 71 standing out on the team's offensive line.

He was an important element of the team that won the CONADEIP Premier Conference championship in 2019.

Originally from Tijuana, Baja California, he now has the chance to fulfill his lifelong dream of becoming an NFL player.

The International Players Program was begun in 2017 and aims to provide international athletes the opportunity to compete at NFL level, improve their skills, and ultimately earn a spot on a team.

Isaac Alarcón became the first Mexican from the League's International Players Program to get a spot on an NFL team.
